

Contents

Books

Since 1996, I have co-authored 13 commercial computer books for four different publishers: IDG Books Worldwide, Sybex, Peachpit Press, and Osborne McGraw-Hill. Many of these books have won awards—including two international awards—from the Society for Technical Communication's publications competitions.

Articles

In 1998, I became a department editor for Technical Communication, the professional journal for the Society for Technical Communication. As department editor, I have co-authored five technology-related articles, and I currently serve as a Publications Board member for the journal.

Columns

I am the primary author of two syndicated computing columns: "Rays on Computing" and "Rays on the Internet for Kids," available through Globe Syndicate.

Web site

In 1998, I developed The Official TECHWR-L Web site, a reference site supporting a 4300-subscriber listserv list. I currently maintain this site with updates about once per month, as a continuing part-time, volunteer project.

References

I welcome and encourage you to contact the provided references, who are familiar with my work, projects, professionalism, and characteristics.

